

For U.S. Investors

DadsVault Binder

Fathers – Are You Financially Negligent Or Financially Prepared?

This message is for fathers who take responsibility for their family's finances.

There are many of us in the world, but there is an unspoken problem.

When it comes to things like financial record-keeping, financial investment decisions and financial preparation for life's curveballs, our education system didn't teach us about any of it.

There are many fathers out there who need help.

If you don't need help with these financial topics, this material may not be for you.

Here's the BIG problem in a nutshell...

Life doesn't always go according to plan. In fact, certain things are beyond your control.

Those things are called outcomes.

When you become a mature man, you realize that life can turn on a dime, and suddenly, the beautiful outcomes you dreamed of for the FUTURE turn into the heartbreaking reality of TODAY.

Don't get me wrong — you can take deliberate actions in the present to increase the likelihood of reaching desirable outcomes in the future. But likelihood is not a guarantee.

You need ways to hedge your bets.

And hedging your bets is what I want to talk to you about today.

Most men resist thoughts about hardships...

And believe me, I understand why... certain things are scary to think about.

But I've found that when you "man up" and take even a small step, peace of mind begins to come your way.

And that feeling of peace about the future can free up your mind to focus on your daily priorities in creating the life you hope for.

You begin to understand that, although you can't control everything in life, you can take some simple-and-easy steps to become a Prepared Father

I know what you're thinking...

It's easy for me to talk. After all, I AM a Prepared Father.

But if you know anything about me, you know that I wasn't always prepared.

In fact, when tragedy struck, I was totally unprepared to be the single parent of three young children aged 5, 7 and 9.

I thought I was a great father because I worked 80 hour weeks to build a great future for my family... leaving the everyday family details to my wife.

Boy, did I get a rude awakening.

When my wife died unexpectedly, I didn't even know passwords for accounts that she managed. And I had no concept of the incredible complexity required to take care of young children.

I was caught flat-footed.

After 3+ years of struggle, I finally got my life and my family back on track. And that's when I made it my mission to make sure father's don't have to live through the same struggles I did.

No, we're not going to solve your entire life in these few minutes today.

But if you'll hang in there with me, I promised to reveal to you (with nothing held back) answers to some of the most challenging questions of life.

As you're about to discover, you already have something going for you that I had too. You have an investor mindset. What a blessing!

And because you're an investor, you're already comfortable taking action today to create a better tomorrow.

What we're talking about here is having the guts to think ahead on behalf of those you care about. To anticipate a time when disaster might strike when you least expect it.

Now I know what you're thinking, and it probably sounds something like this:

“I'll be in good financial shape in no time...”

You've got a plan in mind, and over time, everything will fall together, and your family will have real security.

Yep, that's the most common plan I hear today. But here's the problem — it only works if everything goes according to plan. But if one thing goes off the rails, everything falls apart.

For example, you think to yourself, I'll get the perfect career or a big promotion, or I'll open my own business, and I'll make a lot of money.

Then I'll invest a big chunk of money in real estate or stocks or bonds or moon rocks (don't laugh, I knew a guy who did that) and my investments will grow into a hefty asset... and that's when everything will be OK.

That's not really a plan. What if the big promotion doesn't come through. Or what if that can't-miss investment takes a nose dive. Hey, that's exactly what happened to me, and it spiraled into the worst disaster of my life.

That plan is more like wishful thinking. Unfortunately, that's how most men think. But if you're a father and an investor, you're not most men.

Another thing I often hear is:

“My wife also has a really good job...”

OK, great! That means you can enjoy a nicer lifestyle and maybe put more money into your investing.

But... what if something happens to that really good job of hers. Or worse, what if something happens to her and she's no longer able to work. Or take care of the kids. Or do her share of the work around the house.

That's one caught me by surprise. My wife was involved in everything in my life. She took care of all the annoying little details in my business and at home, including taking the kids to school and dentist appointments and birthday parties... you name it. I literally couldn't live without her.

Until suddenly I had to. And my plan fell apart.

“Let the next guy handle it...”

Some men say this as a joke. It means that if they die unexpectedly, their wife will find another husband, and she and the kids will be just fine.

Oh, my God. Don't ever say that, not even if you're kidding. (I've noticed that men never say that in front of their wife. They'd be in hot water if they did.)

There's a grain of truth in that attitude. It acknowledges that life moves on. If you were to die unexpectedly, your family would mourn for a time, maybe a long time, but at some point they would sort out their life and figure out what to do next without you.

But here's a scenario that's even more troubling. What if you don't die? What if instead you are disabled or incapacitated? Suddenly, not only are you unable to support your family, you're also a drain on them.

Three lies men tell themselves...

Those are the three things I hear most often as I'm talking to men about their finances. I want you to think about them and see if you're leaving yourself wide open to a disaster.

Are you living in a fantasy where everything will be perfect someday? If so, that day may never arrive, and if problems arise, you may be caught short.

Or if you have a false sense of security because your wife also has a great job and a great income — that's like a double fantasy. Everything will be OK as long as everything stays the same for you AND for your wife. Well, life won't stay the same. Things will get better... or worse.

And let's not ever discuss the third one: “Let the next guy handle it.” If that really is your attitude, then you have problems that are deeper than financial. I'm not here to talk to men who think like that. I'm here to talk to men who step up.

These things are terrible to think about...

And I don't want you to spend your life thinking about all the awful things that might happen. That's no way to live your life.

But if you neglect these areas, you're leaving yourself and your family unprepared.

And if you've read this far, you can no longer claim ignorance. The lessons on this page are going to stick with for a lifetime.

You'll always know that TODAY you had a chance to make things more secure for you and your family. And the failure to take action will leave you with feelings of regret, wondering whether you have what it takes to operate as a responsible father.

And practically speaking, you may just decide to try harder to make your unworkable plan workable. And you may choose life options based solely on money... always a big mistake.

The easiest step to take today...

Now I'm not telling you to go out and hire a financial planner. In fact, I'm quite disappointed in the direction of the financial planning industry. In my experience, most financial planners are content to get their hands on your stock portfolio and earn hefty fees for buying and selling your investments. Worse, hiring a financial planner may give you a false sense of security.

Instead, I'm telling you to take responsibility for your own financial future – not IN the future but IN the present.

And to plan where you're going, you first need to figure out where you are now.

And that's where my DadsVault Binder comes in. I designed it as the smallest, easiest, most inexpensive step you can take to become a Prepared Father.

Now, I'm not saying there's anything magical about the DadsVault Binder. It won't automatically solve all your future problems.

But if you set aside just a few minutes each week to work through the binder as I show you, you will get a crystal clear vision of where you are now. And you will have a collection of data that, in a nightmare scenario, your loved ones will run to, desperately thankful to have the information needed to face the coming weeks, months and years.

About the DadsVault Binder...

The DadsVault Binder is the financial tool I wish I'd had when my wife passed away unexpectedly. With the binder in hand, I wouldn't have felt the rising panic when disaster struck. I could have simply focused on my children, instead of floundering around trying to navigate a legal and financial nightmare.

The DadsVault Binder makes it easy and foolproof to capture all of the following information:

Contact Data: At a critical time, you don't want to waste precious time searching for important legal information, emergency contacts to notify, phone numbers of key advisors, social security numbers, citizenship records, and more.

Documentation Pouches: You'll need copies of birth certificate, marriage certificate, citizenship papers, vehicle title and registration, wills, all in one easy-to-access place.

Non-Investment Real Estate Documents: For situations involving probate, you'd need copies of the lease or ownership records, spare keys, lockbox keys or combinations — little things that can cause a big headache if you can't put your hands on them.

Banking records: Names and key contact information for all banking relationships, including credit card companies, and safe deposit boxes — so you or your loved can access financial resources immediately in a crisis.

Medical History: A complete record of all immediate family members in case medical, surgical, or (God forbid) end-of-life decisions are needed on the spot.

Insurance Policies: A handy place for information on insurance policies covering health, life, disability, long term care, and critical illness for easy access to "worst case scenario" documents.

Estate Planning: When I lost my wife, probate was an endless nightmare without quick and easy access to wills, beneficiaries, planned giving, living will, power of attorney for financial matters and power of attorney for medical care.

Investments/Annuities/Pensions: Every year, millions of dollars go unclaimed because family members didn't know about an investment account or pension benefits. This section documents everything you need to know about assets intended to preserve the quality of life for your family.

Debts and Liabilities: In a crisis, decisions are easier and less stressful when full information is at your fingertips. Without a grasp of liabilities, a nasty shock can arise just when everyone thought finances were settled.

Personal: There's even a section with all the little things in life that everyone needs to be aware of, including preferences for funeral arrangements and final letters to your loved ones.

Complete value package...

I've packaged everything you need into a easy-to-use format where you can do your own organizing — including updates as time passes and situations change.

The retail value of the organizer is $197. But during this introductory period, I'm offering to you at a 50% savings for only:

$97 for the complete organizing system.

I'm offering this half-off discount because I want to reach as many fathers as possible as quickly as possible.

To have your accountant or attorney organize all of this information might cost several thousand dollars and require time-consuming involvement from you.

At only $97, the DadsVault Binder is a bargain.

Think about it — many people don't hesitate to spend $3.50 a day on coffee. That means they're spending more than the cost of the DadsVault Binder every single month. And the coffee is gone in minutes, while the benefits of the DadsVault Binder last a lifetime — and beyond.

So enjoy the half-off pricing now and keep the $100 savings in you wallet.

Bonuses

To make the offer ever more useful I'm including these bonuses at no extra charge

The entire DadsVault Binder in a convenient PDF format so you can print blank pages whenever you need to update your binder. Value: $97

An email tutorial series with tips on how to gather the right information fast without overlooking critical documents you might never think of. Value: $200

A collection of videos I recorded explaining some the more complex issues in financial preparedness. Value: $350

Lifetime free updates and notices as requirements change. Value: $97

Early access and discounts to financial training programs I plan to introduce. Value: $100s or even $1000s in discounts, bonuses, and perks.

With the DadsVault Binder and all these bonuses, you'll have taken a gigantic step toward becoming a Prepared Father, all for the low price of just $97.

90-Day Money-Back Guarantee

I'm sure the DadsVault Binder will become the cornerstone of your financial protection plan. So feel free to explore it for a full 90 days. If for any reason (or no reason at all) you find that it's not for you, just ask for a full refund of the purchase price. And you can even keep the bonuses with my compliments.

You get:

- Complete 56-page Record-Keeping System
- PDF Document
- Email Tutorial Series
- Video Training Collection
- Lifetime Updates and Notices
- Early Access and Discounts on Financial Training Programs

How to order...

To place your order, click the button below to go to our secure payment screen where you can enter your contact information and choose a method of payment.

To get started, click the button below.

Button: [Yes, I Want To Order The DadsVault Binder!]

We value your privacy and promise never to share your personal information with anyone.

Before the tragedy in my life, how I wish someone had grabbed me by the shoulders and shouted for me to become a Prepared Father. How I wish I had a simple, easy-to-use record system like this to guide me. It would have made all the difference.

So I urge you to take action. I can't think of a simpler, easier step you could take right now that would mean as much to you and your family. And make sure you show it to your kids. It may be the most valuable lesson you ever teach them.

The DadsVault Binder system contains everything you need for the journey of becoming a Prepared Father. The tutorials alone are worth more than the entire package, so everything else is a bonus. And in case it's not for you, you're protected by my 90-Day Money Back Guarantee True, it will take a bit of effort to collect all the information, but I'll be your guide and cheerleader. Don't worry, you can do this!

You're only 60 seconds away from taking a small step that can change your life and get you on the road to true peace of mind and security for you and your family. But unless you take that step, you're gambling with your future and your family's. You owe it to the people in your life to become a Prepared Father. Click below to get started.

Button: [Yes, I Want To Order The DadsVault Binder!]

We value your privacy and promise never to share your personal information with anyone.